

Get Up-To-Date on the OneFPA Network

As FPA continues the listening tour to solicit stakeholder input on the OneFPA Network draft plan and vision, we want to continue to update members on what we are hearing. Be sure to check out the OneFPA Network Round-Up for March where you can learn about the concerns and questions we are receiving, the many listening tour stops with chapters, the volunteers taking part in task forces, and more.

FPA Launches New Publication to Support the Next Generation Planner

In partnership with FP Transitions, FPA revealed its first edition of Next Generation Planner, a monthly publication designed exclusively for those who are new to the financial planning profession. The new app-based publication provides tailored content to help new planners develop personally and professionally as they advance on their career journey. FPA members interested in receiving the Next Generation Planner each month can download the app on their Apple, Android or Windows devices.

Announcing the Launch of the All-New FPA Job Board

FPA is committed to providing our members with resources that help them advance in their career journeys. With that goal in mind, the FPA Job Board has been redesigned and re-engineered to make it more user-friendly and intuitive, while making it a more impactful tool for both employers and job seekers. While the primary focus is on connecting employers with future employees or interns, the new platform also includes some exciting features, including resume writing, reference checking and career coaching services (additional costs apply). Whether you are seeking the best talent in the profession, or you are seeking the next opportunity in your career, the FPA Job Board is here to help. Learn more.

New Self-Study Course on Providing College Funding Advice

In partnership with Capstone College Partners™, FPA launched The Financial Planner's Guide to College Funding, an eight-module, self-study online course that helps financial planners advise college-bound families on how to pay for college as well as build a college planning niche in their practice. The comprehensive guide explains the scope and character of the student loan crisis, demystifies financial aid, provides a repeatable end-to-end process, uncovers tax strategies for college-bound families, and more. CFP® professionals can earn up to 11 CFP® CE credits for completion of the course. Get the online course now.
